On the Edge of Town: Almshouses of Western New York
by Lynn S. Beman and Elizabeth Marotta
In the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, cities and towns were bustling places in Western New York. Those who could not afford to care for themselves were sent to a building at the edge of town. Whether they were called almshouses, the poorhouses, or county homes, these facilities have a mixed legacy that is both inspiring and controversial. $9.95 Retail.

When There Were Poorhouses: Early Care in Rural New York 1808 – 1950
by James M. Boles, EdD
To prevent them from slipping into the void of abandoned history, this book describes the institutions—some highly visible and others lesser known in and near Niagara County—that provided some of the earliest organized care for the blind, deaf, sick, disabled, insane, and destitute. Our predecessors early efforts provided a foundation for many of the programs in New York State that offer progressive services to its citizens today. $24.99 Retail.

No Offense Intended: A Directory of Historical Disability Terms
by Natalie Kirisits, Douglas Platt and Thomas Stearns
The Directory is the result of museum research into the history of early almshouses, hospitals, institutions, and schools. Most of the terms were early practitioners’ attempts to clarify and identify the nature and causes of diseases and deviations in human behavior. As you read the directory, it is easily seen that, historically, yesterday’s diagnosis can, a few generations later, become negative and enter everyday language. $12.95 Retail.

The Gold Cure Institutes of Niagara Falls, New York 1890s
by James M. Boles, EdD
The Gold Cure facilities are credited with developing an enlightened philosophy toward addiction that viewed it as a disease rather than a moral failing. Up to three times a day, patients were injected with the secret gold cure, afterward experiencing fear, painful muscle spasms, vomiting, dizziness and confusion. The extremely negative experience may have caused the patients to reconsider their bad habits. Proponents of these methods claimed to cure liquor, opium, morphine, other drug addictions, the tobacco habit, and nerve exhaustion. $11.95 Retail.

Abandoned Asylums of New England
A photographic journey by John Gray, Historical Insight by the Museum of disABILITY History
This photographic journey into the world of urban exploration documents the state of some of New England’s storied temples of control, treatment, and rehabilitation of individuals with disabling conditions. The Museum of disABILITY History provides a historical context for these asylums that heightens the degree of entropy into which these feats of architectural grandeur have fallen. $64.95 Retail.

continued on back
Ivan the Invacar Helps Big Dog
Written by Jim Boles, Illustrated by Bob Cunningham

There are many ways to look at disabilities. Ivan the INVACAR is a car that transports his driver Derry, who is in a wheelchair, to work. So, Ivan is an adaptive device to help people with disabilities. However, Ivan is also a reluctant superhero who helps those in need: In this first of many adventures, Ivan gains his superpowers and rescues his friend, Big Dog. $9.95 Retail.

Ivan the Invacar Helps Little Cat
Written by Jim Boles, Illustrated by Bob Cunningham

In this second of many adventures, Ivan, using his superpowers and along with his friend, Big Dog, rescue Little Cat from high in a tree. $9.95 Retail.

Ivan the Invacar and the Cave
Written by Jim Boles, Illustrated by Bob Cunningham

In this third of many adventures, Ivan, using his superpowers and along with his friend, Big Dog, rescue the town from the horrible drought and help Hannah and the hedgehogs out of the cave. $9.95 Retail.

Ivan the Invacar Activity Book
Illustrated by Bob Cunningham

Fun and engaging coloring pages of the Ivan series. $5.95 Retail.

The Education of the Feeble-Minded
By Kate Gannet Wells
Introduction by Douglas Platt

“The Education of the Feeble-Minded” traces the development of the Massachusetts School for the Feeble-Minded at Waltham, MA, which was established as an experimental school in 1848. Wells includes some pre-history, mentioning Dr. Edward Seguin of France, his influence on Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe, and Howe’s tenacity in championing the school’s mission and growth. It is an elucidating piece on the instruction of the ‘feeble-minded’ and the eugenic attitude prevalent in society at the turn of the twentieth century. $4.95 Retail.

The Perkins Institution and Massachusetts School for the Blind
By Samuel Eliot
Introduction by Douglas Platt

“The Perkins Institution and Massachusetts School for the Blind” chronicles 66 years of Perkins’s history with a truly insider view. Eliot introduces the reader to the many generous benefactors of the school, and the graphics offer a chance to see the original buildings, people, and methods of instruction of the blind at the close of the nineteenth century. $4.95 Retail.